WHAT MYSTERIOUS ADVENTURE BEFALLS THE STRANGE TWINS IN THE NEXT ISSUE??

Everybody saw the Mayor die.

But nobody could tell you exactly what happened. None of that throng that had been gathered in the square that evening to hear the Mayor's speech could give the same story. And most of them didn't even dare to think of what they had seen.

Mayor Hoffman had not been popular. He misused the public funds for his own benefit and everybody knew it. But he also had the police department in his control and everybody knew that also. Many enemies, publicly and privately, had made threatening remarks about the Mayor and most of them were there that night, but no suspicion could be thrown in their direction.

The coroner had pronounced the death as slow strangulation—but even he wasn't sure of the exact method.

The people in the Square that night had been listening to a long harangue for almost an hour. The Mayor was still going full blast. His fist was raised in a powerful gesture to emphasize his bellowing speech. He brought it down in a wide arc, but it never pounded on the balustrade before him. It stopped half-way and the Mayor jerked his whole body forward, his mouth still open, but no words came forth. His jaw stiffened and jutted out.

His eyes stared in horror above the heads of the people.

The crowd stood almost as still as the paralyzed Mayor. Then a slow, frightened murmur seethed through them and rose to terrified wails and shrieks as a sickly green light seemed to emanate from the body of the stiff figure on the balcony. He glowed from inside like an eerie neon illumination — streaks of purple shone lividly through the green as his blood vessels swelled under an unseen pressure.

Most of the women turned and ran from the crowd as the Mayor's head began to swell rapidly. They did not see him turn a fiery red and at last fall headlong over the railing to the paved court.

In another part of town, Gustav Huer was playing his violin. Wild strains came from the taut strings of Gustav's fiddle. They were not musical sounds — but seemed to be shrieks of unrepressed joy, mounting higher and higher until the neighboring windows were thrown open and heads popped out shouting in angry protest. But Gustav's rising crescendos topped them all.

Suddenly the screaming violin stopped. Silence blanketed the neighborhood once more, until the noise from the square began to eddy into the side streets and excited figures ran, shouting the news, throughout the town.

"Mayor Hoffman's dead! He's been killed—Murdered!"

Gustav Huer ran from his garret, clattered noisily down the four steep flights and dashed into the street shouting in a hoarse voice, strained with great emotion:

"It was I! I killed the grafting Mayor. I killed him! I! And now I will be the great liberator. I will be King! I have Power — great unknown power and a whole army at my command—the world shall be free of all tyrants and dictators — and I, Gustav Huer, a humble violinist, will lead them. I and my violin!"

Everyone thought that Gustav had gone mad. But the police arrested him on a charge of murder for want of a better suspect.

He was examined carefully by all the great physicians in Europe, but they could not establish any proof that he was insane except for the fact that he insisted that he had killed the Mayor in a way that only he would ever know, for it held the secret of world power. It would be too dangerous for the knowledge to be spread and used by unscrupulous men.

"But Gustav," he was asked by a famous Austrian doctor, "You admit to the murder of Mayor Hoffman. Wasn't that an unscrupulous act?"

"No," answered the violinist firmly. "He deserved it. It is not wrong to right an evil. Mayor Hoffman was evil. There are murderous rulers in this world that shall also die at my command. For the good of the people!"

Gustav Huer was tried and convicted of murder. His own confession helped to convict him. And as the state was anxious to be through with the matter, they convinced the jury that Gustav had poisoned the Mayor with an obscure drug bearing a terrifically long name.

In prison, the "commander of unseen powers" paced dejectedly up and down the cell. His cellmate, a hardened murderer awaiting his execution day, watched him through narrow slits of eyes.

"What's the matter, with you, musician? You asked for this, didn't you? What did you have to run out and yell to everybody that you murdered the guy—didn't you know it would land you in the death cell?"

"No, Fritz, no—I thought they would believe that I could free them. That was a big mistake. Now I have lost all hope of that. They have taken my violin. If I could have it just once more in my hands—just once more—I could show them!"

Fritz, the killer, shook his head, half in pity, half in disgust. He shifted his huge frame on the iron bed and pulled the thin little man down beside him.

"Come on, Huer, tell me the secret. How did you murder the Mayor? What's your violin got to do with it?"

Gustav sighed deeply and then plunged into his tale. It didn't matter, telling it to Fritz—he was going to die soon anyway. It was a story of long years of experimenting with sound. Gustav had discovered a way to produce notes on his violin higher than the human ear could detect. Animals, he knew are attuned to some of these sounds—but Gustav went further than animal life. He contacted a specie of ether-beings that floated invisibly about the earth communicating in these unheard sounds. He spoke to them with his violin!

And more wonderful still—he trained them to answer by plucking the lower notes in certain rhythms!

He had a whole army of ether-beings at his command. It was they who had murdered the mayor in so hideous a manner. So, at least, he told Fritz.

And Fritz told the guard. And the guard told the authorities. And the authorities shook their heads with a smile and murmured, "Poor Gustav is still as mad as ever, but he shall soon hang."

When Gustav asked for his violin as a last favor before he died on the gallows, they gave it to him willingly. The guards leered in through the bars and asked mockingly, "Going to murder some dictators with your fiddle, Gustav?"

The violinist grew pale with fury and he shouted, "Yes, yes, I will do what I promised before I die. I will free the people—although they don't deserve it if there are many like you — you dull-witted gorilla!"

Gustav played without ceasing for the two hours before his execution. Even the stupid guard listened with awe. But toward the end the music stopped. And yet, Gustav still moved his bow across the strings, still trilled his fingers as though he were playing an intricate concerto.

"He's gone out of his head completely, now," said the guard to Fritz who sat in wondering silence. But he sounded like he was trying to convince himself.

Gustav Huer was taken away and hung by the neck until dead.

Fritz and the guard sighed audibly when they heard the trap sprung. But their relief was broken by the sound of a violin being plucked. Gustav's fiddle lay on the cot. And something they could not see was plucking an eerie rhythm on the strings!

That night the world was astounded by startling news. The world's great dictators had died simultaneously, choked to death by an invisible force, swollen to ghastly proportions!

The people of freed nations built a huge monument to their liberator, but by that time Gustav Huer was dead.

IN THE YEAR 3000, THE EARTH, PASSING TOO NEAR TO THE SUN, WAS BURNED TO A CRISP. FROM ITS CORE CAME A RACE OF MONSTERS WHO OVERRAN THE PARCHED WORLD. . . . THE ONLY HUMANS LEFT HAVE SURVIVED IN PROFESSOR SOLIS' HEAT-PROOF CITADEL, NEAR NEW YORK STATE.

LIKE A PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS, THE CORE CREATURES DEVASTATE THE RUINS THAT REMAIN UPON THE SCORCHED EARTH.

SAFE WITHIN THEIR CITADEL, PROF. SOLIS AND HIS YOUNG ASSISTANT BLAZE BARTON DISCUSS THE FUTURE...

IF WE COULD ONLY GET OUT AND GENERATE ENOUGH WATER FROM THIS NEW VEGETATION, IT MIGHT RESTORE THE EARTH.

MEANWHILE, FROM THE PLANET VENUS, COMES AN EXPEDITION TO DISCOVER WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO ITS NEIGHBOR EARTH.

THE ROCKET FROM VENUS LANDS AT SOME DISTANCE FROM SOLIS CITY.

THAT MUST BE THE CAPITOL. LET US GO THERE.

BUT SUDDENLY, THE BATMEN OF VENUS ARE MET BY A GROUP OF CORE CREATURES.

BEWARE, MY MASTER! THESE EARTHLINGS LOOK VICIOUS!

RUN, MASTER! I'LL KEEP THEM AT BAY!

WE'RE CUT OFF FROM OUR ROCKET! MAKE FOR THOSE RUINS!

TO THE DOME! QUICK!

THE FUGITIVES TAKE REFUGE HIGH IN A RUINED DOME.

IN SOLIS CITY, BLAZE, PROFESSOR SOLIS, AND HIS DAUGHTER HAVE DECIDED TO AID THE STRANGERS FROM VENUS.

THEY MUST BE IN HIDING. I'LL FIND THEM.

AS THE HEAT GATE CLOSES, A CORE CREATURE SMASHES THE LOCK.

UNAWARE OF DANGER, SOLIS WORKS ON IN HIS LABORATORY.

WITH THIS, I CAN PROJECT A RAY CAPABLE OF FREEZING EVERYTHING IN ITS PATH.

OH KINGS, THEIR DOOR IS BROKEN AT LAST!

6000! WE'LL ATTACK THE CITY. YOU CAPTURE THOSE IN THE RUINS.

BLAZE, NOT KNOWING THAT HE IS BEING FOLLOWED, LOCATES THE BAT MEN IN THEIR PLACE OF REFUGE.

DON'T SHOOT! I AM A REAL EARTHLING. THOSE MONSTERS ARE OUR ENEMIES!

BLAZE QUICKLY PROVES HIS STATEMENTS.

PROVE IT! HERE THEY COME!

SWIFTLY THE BAT MEN SWOOP DOWN TOWARD THE CITY CARRYING BLAZE BETWEEN THEM.

BLAZE! COME OUT OF IT! THEY'VE CARRIED MY DAUGHTER OFF! SHE'LL DIE IN THAT OUTDOOR HEAT! QUICK! THE ICE-RAY!

BLAZE AND SOLIS PROJECT THE FREEZING RAY AT THE FLEEING CORE CREATURES. THEY, UNABLE TO SURVIVE IN LOW TEMPERATURES, DROP IN THEIR TRACKS.

YOU'RE SAFE IN THE PATH OF THE RAY. QUICK! I THINK THAT THERE'S MY DAUGHTER!

TO ESCAPE THE COLD, THE CORE CREATURES RE-ENTER THEIR ABODE DEEP IN THE EARTH.

HUGE MACHINES FILL THE FISSURES AND CHASMS.

WE WILL RETURN WITH PLANTS THAT WILL THRIVE IN YOUR NEW TEMPERATURE!

THE EARTH IS A NEW PARADISE AND IT'S OUR JOB TO REBUILD ANOTHER MIGHTY WORLD!

NEON

The UNKNOWN

by Tegor Maroy

NEON THE UNKNOWN A YOUNG SOLDIER IN THE FOREIGN LEGION LOST IN THE DESERT FOR DAYS WITHOUT FOOD AND WATER. SUDDENLY COMES UPON AN OASIS. DRINKING DEEPLY OF ITS CONTENTS A GREAT CHANGE COMES OVER HIM!

THE WATER OF THE OASIS CONTAINED A NEONIC SUBSTANCE, WHICH MIRACULOUSLY CHANGED NEON INTO A MAN POSSESSING UNUSUAL NEONIC POWERS AND SUPERIOR STRENGTH.

WE ARE SORRY TO SEE YOU GO, BUT I REALIZE THAT YOU ARE NEEDED WHEREVER CRIME OR OPPRESSION THRIVE, NEON!

THERE'S A COUNTRY IN EUROPE SUFFERING UNDER THE CRUEL HEEL OF A VICIOUS TYRANT. PERHAPS I CAN HELP HIS VICTIMS...

THE CONCENTRATION CAMP OF RACHAW IN DUNLAND.

SOME OF THE GREATEST MINDS OF THE WORLD ARE IMPRISONED IN THIS FOUL TORTURE CAMP.

WE, WHO COULD HAVE LED THE WORLD IN PEACE ARE DYING HERE WHILE HE WAGES A USELESS WAR!

OUR BOOKS ARE ALL BURNED!

BACK! BREED OF SWINE! WE SHOULD KILL YOU NOW! WHAT GRATITUDE FOR OUR KINDNESS!

SUDDENLY, THE BULGING FIGURE OF NEON APPEARS BEFORE THE CRINGING PRISONERS...

STOP THIS... BESTIAL CRUELTY! THESE MEN ARE INTELLIGENT, YOU BRUTAL FOOL!

BUT THE VICIOUS GUARDS ARE QUICK TO ATTACK, AND NEON ALLOWS THEM TO OVERPOWER HIM.....

SEEMINGLY UNCONSCIOUS, HE IS CARRIED TO THE DARK, EVIL-SMELLING CELLS...

THROW THE DOG IN THERE! WE WILL GIVE HIM HIS 'MEDICINE' LATER!

WHEN THE GUARDS ARE GONE:

WHAT? YOU ARE NOT HURT?

NO, I'VE COME TO HELP YOU ESCAPE!

AMAZING!

IT IS UP TO YOU MEN OF GENIUS TO SAVE THE WORLD! I HAVE POWERS THAT CAN ASSIST YOU

WHAT DO YOU ADVISE US TO DO? WE MUST FORCE THE DICTATOR TO SIGN A PEACE! THEN YOU SHALL SET UP A DEMOCRATIC FORM OF GOVERNMENT... FOLLOW ME...

NEONIC RAYS FLARE FROM HIS FINGER TIPS AS THE MAN OF POWER MELTS THE PRISON BARS.....

EAGERLY, THE CAPTIVES MAKE GOOD THEIR ESCAPE!

IT IS A MIRACLE!

PERHAPS, BUT ITS RESULTS WILL BE VERY REAL!

WE MUST HURRY!

THAT TRAIN WILL CARRY US TO THE NATION'S CAPITAL! COME ON!

AGAIN BRINGING HIS AMAZING FORCES INTO PLAY, NEON STOPS THE ONRUSHING LOCOMOTIVE.....

HALT!

PRISONERS FROM RACHAW! YOU CAN'T BOARD THIS TRAIN!

SORRY, BUT YOU WON'T MOVE, UNLESS WE DO!

THE ENGINEER REALIZES THAT HE IS POWERLESS AGAINST NEON'S TREMENDOUS FORCES AND PERMITS THE RAGGED PRISONERS TO CLIMB INTO THE CARS.....

SOON WE WILL END THIS REIGN OF TERROR!

HERE WE GO!

THEY REACH THE CAPITAL AND MOUNT THE STEPS OF THE CHANCERY.....

WE'LL RUN INTO TROUBLE, BUT DON'T LET IT STOP YOU! I'M CONFIDENT I CAN HANDLE ANY OPPOSITION!

THROUGH A WINDOW, A SMALL FIGURE WATCHES THE APPROACHING BAND OF AVENGERS

IT IS RADOLF THE DICTATOR.

HOW DID THOSE MEN ESCAPE? WHERE ARE MY GUARDS?! IDOT! DUMBHEAD! KILL THE SWINE!

MENACING FOOTSTEPS RESOUND AS THE GUARD SURROUNDS NEON'S MEN.

NEON SENDS FORTH A QUICK FLASH THAT SPRINGS INTO A WALL OF PROTECTING FLAME...

WHAT IS THIS?

STAND BACK!

YOUR PUNY GUNS CAN'T STOP THESE MEN FROM CARRYING OUT THEIR MISSION!

RADOLF WILL NOT WELCOME ME, BUT—

NEON BURSTS INTO THE DICTATOR'S PRIVATE CHAMBER...

WHO ARE YOU? GO AWAY! LEAVE ME ALONE! GUARDS! GUARDS!

FRIGHTENED, RADOLF?! WHEN YOU SEE THE GHOSTS OF MEN VICTIMS OF THE SCHEMES OF YOUR VICIOUS AND DEMENTED BRAIN, YOU WILL SUFFER THE TORTURE THAT YOUR SADISTIC GUARDS INFLECTED ON THEM!
